

CHANGER CLUB · DYNASTY VSL

Post-Production Brief

Audience: UHNW 50+ · Monaco, Switzerland, Italy, Dubai · $20M+ liquid

Framework: 8-section direct-response VSL structure (Cole Gordon-style)

· Talent: Jonas Rolo + Camelia Rolo · Runtime target: 4:00–4:30

Note on provenance: Industry references (Errol Morris Interrotron, Marc Randolph, Wistia engagement data) are verified. Conversion numbers in §1 are starting hypotheses, not industry benchmarks — recalibrate to client funnel data within 14 days of launch.

0. Read this first

This audience cannot be sold to. They have been sold to by every wealth-management firm, private bank, yacht broker, and luxury concierge service for thirty years. They are immune. The only register that converts is the register of an equal speaking quietly to another equal.

Every editorial decision in this film answers one question: would a sixty-year-old with twenty million in liquid assets, sitting on his sofa in Monaco with his wife next to him, watch this without rolling his eyes?

If you cannot answer yes for a specific cut, the cut is wrong. Fix it or remove it.

1. Conversion targets

This brief is operational, not artistic. Every editorial choice is judged against the numbers below but read this section carefully: the targets are starting hypotheses, not benchmarks. Set true targets against the client's prior funnel data within the first 14 days of paid traffic, then enforce them as kill criteria.

UHNW cold traffic to a 4-minute-plus VSL behaves differently from typical direct-response audiences.

2. Who you are editing for

You are not editing for a generic luxury audience. You are editing for one specific human, sitting on a specific sofa, in a specific moment.

He is sixty-two. He built or grew real businesses. He has homes in two of {Monaco, Geneva, Lugano, Milan, Como, Dubai}. His wife is on the sofa next to him when he opens this on his iPad. She decided to click play. Her opinion will determine whether they fill out the application and whether they ever talk about it again.

He is sceptical. Three of his friends have been disappointed by Tiger 21 or YPO chapters. He has a daughter who is eighteen and already strategic, and he is starting to feel quietly that he does not know how to talk to her about what he is going to leave behind.

Edit for him. Edit for her sitting beside him. Every cut decision is made with both of them in the frame of your imagination.

3. The reference

One reference. Anchor here, ignore the rest.

Errol Morris's Interrotron interview Errol Morris on Donald Rumsfeld: 'One of the strangest interviews I've ever done' style the way subjects look directly into the lens and speak as if to one specific person, without performance, without rhetorical structure, with the camera as a witness rather than a stage.

That is the $4b paired beat. That is the entire visual language of the film. The camera forgets it is a camera. The talent forgets they are on camera. The viewer feels they are being addressed by name.

What we are not referencing: luxury commercial work, watch-ad cinematography, drone-heavy hospitality films, TED Talk visual grammar. If your instinct reaches for any of those references during the edit, the instinct is wrong. Cut it.

4. The 8-second hook audit

The first 8 seconds carry the largest single share of viewer-decision weight in any VSL. Wistia engagement data places the typical decision window at 5–8 seconds. Before any other edit decision, the post lead must audit §1 against this test:

- At second 8, does the viewer understand the stakes? (Family wealth disappearing across generations.)
- At second 8, does the viewer trust the speaker? (Calm, low register, no sales tone.)
- At second 8, is the viewer mildly uncomfortable? (Good. Comfort means we are not landing.)

If any of the three answers is no, recut §1 before continuing with the rest of the film. Do not proceed to §2 edits until §1 passes audit.

5. Three protected mechanics

These are conversion mechanics dressed as direction notes. Cutting any of them costs applications. They are not stylistic preferences.

5.1 The two-second pause before 'I will tell you the reason this is personal.'

After Jonas says 'That is the pattern,' there must be two full seconds of silence on his face before the next line. If the recorded pause is shorter, extend it with room tone. If you find this pause uncomfortably long on your monitor, you have it the right length. This pause is what tells the viewer the next thing is true.

5.2 No eye contact between Jonas and Camelia in §4b and §8.

They are seated together but each looks at the lens, not at each other. If a take has them looking at each other, do not use it. If only that take exists for a line, cut to a single before the eye contact happens. Couples performing intimacy reads as theatre. Two people independently telling the truth to the lens reads as marriage. This rule is what makes §4 work.

5.3 Camelia's line is the line.

"I watched Jonas with her at the dinner table, and I saw something I had seen in my own father. A man with everything to pass on, but no language or way to transmit it effectively."

If you have multiple takes, choose the one where she sounds like she is remembering, not delivering. A breath in the wrong place, a small hesitation before 'my own father' these are gold, not flaws. Do not clean them out. Imperfection is the proof of truth.

6. Section-by-section cut rules

§	TIME	WHO	CUT RULE	MUSIC	B-ROLL
§1	0:00–0:28	Jonas alone	One static take. Hold on his face. No B-roll. No movement.	NONE	NONE
§2	0:28–1:10	Jonas + B-roll	Cut to B-roll on the words 'First,' 'Second,' 'Third.' ≤3 sec each. Return to Jonas immediately.	Low strings	3 cuts only
§3	1:10–1:25	Jonas alone	Static. No cutaways. This is a filter, not a sale.	Low strings	NONE
§4a	1:25–1:50	Jonas close-up	Tighter framing than §1. Hold 2 full seconds after 'That is the pattern.'	NONE	NONE
§4b	1:50–2:10	Jonas +	No takes where they look at each other.	NONE	NONE

		Camelia	Cut between singles only when strictly necessary. Hold the two-shot.
§5	2:10–2:25	Jonas alone	Brief. Calm. One static take. No music swell into CTA.	Low strings	NONE
§6	2:25–2:55	Jonas walking	Single observational shot. No cutaways to architecture. He carries it.	Low strings	NONE
§7	2:55–3:25	Jonas alone	Tighter than §1. Calm authority. No urgency in the pacing.	Low strings	NONE
§8	3:25–end	Jonas + Camelia	Held two-shot. Slow fade to black after Camelia's line. Music fades with image, not before.	Low strings	NONE

7. Kill list

These editorial moves have killed VSLs in this register before. They are forbidden in this cut. If you are tempted by any of them during post, the answer is no.

DO NOT	WHY IT KILLS THE FILM
Music swell under any emotional line	Audience reads it as manipulation. Closes the tab.
B-roll over Camelia's confession or Jonas's response in §4	Replaces truth with decoration. Kills conversion.

Cuts faster than 4 seconds during dialogue	Social-media pacing. Wrong audience. Reads as anxious.
Any take where Jonas and Camelia look at each other	Reads as theatre. Breaks the marriage spell.
Drone shots, aerials, establishing wide of Monaco/Dubai	Reads as travel-board ad. Patronising to this viewer.
Animated logo, lower-thirds with names mid-dialogue, statistics on screen during 70% line	Distraction during the highest-conversion moments.
Any transition other than straight cut + one final fade-to-black	Visible technique = visible production = sales tone.
Compressing the 2-second pause in §4 to 'tighten pacing'	That pause is the conversion mechanic. Cutting it costs applications.
Color grade visible to a non-editor viewer	Visible look = production sheen = closes the trust gap.
Reverb tail on the close, music sting on the CTA	Reads as commercial. The film ends in silence on purpose.

8. Visual grammar

Color. Single muted palette throughout — cream, warm neutral, deep burgundy as accent only. The grade must be invisible to a non-editor. If the look is visible, the look is wrong. Match the Project Dynasty deck palette.

Light. Single soft key, slightly above eye-line, falling off into shadow on the unlit side. Do not flatten with fill. Shadows are part of the register.

Framing. Faces. Tight enough that the eyes read. Loose enough that body language reads in §4b. No Dutch tilts, no symmetry games, no visible composition tricks.

Movement. Static throughout. Even §6 walking shot is observational, not kinetic. No push-ins on emotional beats.

Cuts. Slow. The instinct from social-edit training will be cuts every 2–3 seconds. Fight it. Four-second holds on faces are not dead time. They are the line landing.

9. Sound

Music. Silence under §1 and §4. Restrained ambient strings under §2, §3, §6, §7, §8 only — well beneath the dialogue floor. Reference: Max Richter's quieter work, Nils Frahm solo piano. Nothing with rhythm. Nothing with crescendo.

Voice. Warm and forward. Light de-essing only. Trust the recorded intimacy. Audible breaths stay in.

Room tone. Use generously. Two-second pauses with room tone read as truthful silence. The same pauses with digital silence read as edit error.

The film ends in silence, not in music. Music fades with the image to black. No sting on the CTA card.

10. On-screen text

Two on-screen elements only. Anything beyond these is a kill-list violation.

- Opening overlay at 0:25 — 'Jonas Rolo & Camelia Rolo · Co-Founders, Changer Club.' Serif typeface (Canela or equivalent — match Project Dynasty deck). White on image, no box, no shadow. 3-second hold. Slow fade in and out.
- Final card at end after fade — 'Changer Club · Monaco · Dubai' with application CTA below. Same typeface. Held still until the end of the file.

No lower-thirds during dialogue. No statistics on screen during the 70% line. No animated logo. No pull-quotes. The viewer's attention belongs to the faces.

11. §2 B-roll specification

Three cuts only, between 2 and 3 seconds each, cutting on the words 'First,' 'Second,' 'Third':

- Marc Randolph on stage at the Changer reception (existing footage — confirm with Julia Stradina).
- Heir in conversation at a reception, three-quarters view, never direct-to-camera.
- Co-investment signing — hands, pen, document. Shallow depth of field. No faces.

If any of the three is unavailable or weak, hold on Jonas instead. A weak B-roll cut damages credibility more than its absence. No B-roll anywhere else in the film.

12. A/B test plan

Two variants ship at launch. The losing variant is killed at day 14.

12.1 Hook variants (first 15 seconds)

- Variant A: opens on Jonas's hook line as written, plain interior, no setup.
- Variant B: opens with the 70% statistic spoken first, then Jonas's name and the rest of the hook.

Test: completion rate at the 30-second mark across both variants.

Winner takes 100% of paid spend from day 15.

12.2 Thumbnail variants (for paid distribution)

- Variant A: Jonas alone, mid-confession, eye contact with lens.
- Variant B: Jonas and Camelia paired shot from §4b.

Test: click-through rate on identical headline copy. Decision criterion: which variant draws more women clicks (proxy for spouse-forward dynamic).

13. Pre-launch validation protocol

Before paid launch, test with three real prospects who fit the audience profile. Schedule 20-minute Zooms. Send each prospect the link 5 minutes before the call. Watch their face on Zoom while they watch the film.

Specifically observe:

- Do they reach for their phone at any point? Note the timecode. That is a broken cut.
- Where does their face change? That is where the film is landing.
- After the film: do they ask a question, or do they pause? A pause is the strongest possible signal.

If any of the three test viewers reaches for their phone within the first 30 seconds, recut §1 before launch. No exceptions.

14. Deliverables

- Master VSL, 4:00–4:30, 4K UHD, 25fps, ProRes 422 HQ master + h.265 distribution
- Two hook variants for A/B test (first 15 seconds, integrated into otherwise identical masters)
- Two thumbnail variants for paid distribution
- Three vertical cutdowns for paid social — 30, 45, 60 seconds, 9:16
- One horizontal 60-second teaser for LinkedIn and direct WhatsApp distribution
- 8–12 production stills for application landing page and press
- All §4b takes labeled by line in editor's bin, delivered as selects

15. Languages

English audio only. This audience speaks English at native level regardless of nationality. Do not produce dubs. Subtitles are toggle, never burned in. The English script must not be paraphrased or simplified — plain language patronises this viewer.

16. Editorial authority during post

Pacing changes, B-roll choices, music level, the §4 pause length — all decisions go through the executive producer. Once Jonas and Camelia have signed off on the final cut, they are out of the loop. They should not be making granular pacing decisions. The film is theirs in voice but not in edit.

If a section is not landing during post, stop and flag it before fixing it with B-roll or music. Most apparent edit problems are pacing problems that resolve with longer holds and more silence — not with more material. Adding material to fix a confession is the most common way these films die.

End of brief. Open the footage.

1. HOOK / CLAIM / GUARANTEE (0:00–0:28)

[Jonas on camera. Plain background. No music.]

"If you've built wealth... the real question is no longer return.

It's whether your family can sustain it without you.

Because statistically they won't

The risk is huge - 70% of wealthy families will LOOSE money by the second generation. 90 by the third.

Changer Dynasty Club in Monaco and Dubai is organized around changing that number."

My name is Jonas Rolo, I am co-founder of Changer together with my beautiful wife Camelia and this concerns our family too.

OVERLAY: Jonas Rolo — Co-Founder, Changer Club and Camelia Rolo

2. ELABORATE IN THREE STEPS (0:28–1:10)

[Slight cut-in.]

Changer is not networking, not mingling as a typical social club.

Think of it as an intellectually challenging environment where both — the wealth creator, your spouse and the children - all are exposed to the high-caliber level of thinking.

First, you start sitting with the people who have built what you are building. Last year we hosted Marc Randolph, the co-founder of 400B$ Netflix.. Nobel laureates. First-generation billionaires. New York Times best-selling authors - people who will re-wire your mindset.

Your children enter the same room. Not a junior programme. The same room. They learn valuations. They learn to hold their own conversations with billionaires. They begin to understand what turning ten million into a billion actually requires.

Third, we invest together. The club selects and evaluates technology companies as a group. You and your heir make the decisions jointly. Your child learns investments by deploying capital, with you, in real transactions. That is what develops the intellectual equipment they will need when the business and money is theirs.”

3. GUARANTEE — SCARCITY (1:10–1:25)

“We admit just fifty families a year, across our two chapters in Monaco and Dubai. Five million liquid minimum and clear reputation. We have said no to applicants with considerably more, when the fit was wrong. We will tell you honestly on the call.”

4. PROOF (1:25–2:10)

[Close-up. Most intimate shot.]

“How can I claim any of this?

One of our members Brooks Newmark. Long standing Private equity player. He joined the club at 64. Four years later, he has built an AI company called Rezolve and taken it public at a two billion dollar valuation. His son is now joining the ride. That is not the exception in this club. That is the pattern.

I will also tell you the reason why is it personal.

Camelia: Our eldest is eighteen and we want her to carry onward the family legacy. A year ago I watched Jonas with her at the dinner table, and I saw something I had seen in my own father. A man with everything to pass on, but no language or way to transmit it effectively.

Jonas: My father never had such a conversation with me, and therefore I really struggled in explaining to her what is important and how to inspire her.

Camelia: We did not build Changer Club because we had the answer. We built it because we did not. We needed a room where strong fathers can meet other strong fathers at the moments they don't know how to inspire their sons. We built Changer Club also for the mothers, who carry most of what actually moves through a family, to be seated together at the same table where family dynasties are being built.

Jonas: After a year in Changer program, my daughter is the one leading us on how to structure our family wealth and build the strategy of where to deploy capital. We are starting to implement her proposals together.

Camelia: That is why Changer exists. For the parents who refuse to let the seventy percent loss be their family's legacy number.

6. MECHANISM (2:25–2:55)

Every other club you have experienced offers networking and nice champagne to the parents. The children are not addressed.

You might think - fine, I'll do this inside my own family. It won't unfortunately work. Our children do not take intellectual instruction from their own parents. They never have.

Changer with its 270 power families members and 25bEur in joint capital, is the only place where full family are taught in the same room, at the same time, by the same legends

That's exactly what alters the 70% capital loss, instead - dynasties that scale wealth are being built.

If you are not building something that outlives you, is there is a real reason to be building at all? You already know whether you want to be in this room.

Camelia

Hope to see you, your wife and your children personally at reception in Monaco or Dubai

All of you or neither))))

KEVIN REFERENCE

<https://drive.google.com/file/d/1QO83AlfUDGwNlxWXtCjJIMw4yASB85X/view?usp=sharing>

1. The film, in one paragraph

This is not a podcast and not a corporate piece. It is a four-and-a-half-minute filmed confession from two co-founders to ultra-high-net-worth families. The audience is wealthy, sceptical, and surrounded by people trying to sell them something. They have seen every glossy club video. The only register that works on them is restraint. Quiet camera, quiet light, two people who sound like they mean what they are saying. Anything that feels staged loses the room in the first ten seconds.

2. Talent and energy

Jonas carries seven of eight sections alone. He is the lead voice. European register, around 130 words per minute, with real pauses. He should sound like he is at dinner with a peer, not presenting from a stage. Contractions are minimal. Vulnerability appears once — in §4 — and it must not be rushed.

Camelia appears in §4b and §8. Her presence is structural, not decorative. She is the person who first noticed the gap Jonas talks about. She must sound like a co-diagnostician, not a supporting wife. Her Section 4 line — 'I watched Jonas with him at the dinner table, and I saw something I had seen in my own father' — is the most important line either of them speaks in the entire video. If a take of that line lands, every other take of it becomes secondary footage. Get it on take one or two while she is still finding the words.

3. Two non-negotiable rules

3.1 The pause before 'I will tell you the reason this is personal.'

In §4, after Jonas delivers the Brooks Newmark story and says 'That is the pattern,' he pauses for two full seconds before the next line. Two seconds feels like an eternity on camera. Do not let him cut it short. If he rushes it, reset and do another take. This pause is what tells the viewer the next thing they hear is true.

3.2 No eye contact in the paired shots (§4b and §8).

Jonas and Camelia are seated together but they do not look at each other while they speak. Each of them looks at the lens. They do not nod while the other is speaking. They do not reach for each other. They do not smile reassuringly between lines.

This rule will feel wrong to them. Couples performing intimacy for an audience always read as theatre. Two people independently telling the same truth to the camera read as marriage. Brief them on this before they sit down. Block it on rehearsal. If they slip, reset.

4. Shot list

Lens choices below are minimums — DP can adjust upward in tightness, never wider than what is specified. f-stop is a starting point; protect skin in the close-ups and don't go below f/1.8 on the 85mm or eyes will drift in and out of focus.

SECTION	TIME	WHO	LOOK	CAMERA / LENS	NOTES FOR DP
§1 HOOK	0:00–0:30	Jonas and Camelia	Plain interior. Cool, restrained.	FX3 · 50mm · f/2.0	Static. Eye-line just left of lens. No music. No B-roll under this section.
§2 STEPS	0:30–1:20	Jonas alone + B-roll	Same setup as §1.	FX3 · 50mm · f/2.0 (A-cam) + B-roll cuts	Three B-roll cuts, one per step. ≤3 sec each. Marc Randolph on stage / heir at reception / co-investment signing. Cut on the word 'First', 'Second', 'Third'.
§3 SCARCITY	1:20–1:35	Jonas alone	Same as §1.	FX3 · 50mm · f/2.0	Static. No movement. This is a filter, not a sale.
§4a PROOF	1:35–2:05	Jonas alone — close-up	Tightest framing in video.	FX3 · 85mm · f/1.8	Closer than any other shot. Eyes carry it. Two-second hold after 'That is the pattern.'
§4b PERSONAL	2:05–2:50	Jonas + Camelia	Camera widens. Both seated. Same lighting.	FX3 · 35mm · f/2.5 (wide two-shot) + A7SIII 85mm singles	READ THE RULES PAGE. No eye contact between them. No reaching. No nodding while the other speaks. Each looks at lens.
§5 MIDWAY CTA	2:50–3:00	Jonas alone	Return to §1 setup.	FX3 · 50mm · f/2.0	Brief. Calm. Don't push energy.
§6 MECHANISM	3:00–3:40	Jonas alone	WALKING	FX3 · 35mm · gimbal · f/2.8	Soft focus background. Frame shoulder-up, lead room on the side he's walking toward.
§7 CTA	3:40–4:10	Jonas alone — tight	Return to §1 setup, tighter framing.	FX3 · 85mm · f/1.8	Slightly tighter than §1. Calm authority, not urgency.
§8 CLOSE	4:10–4:30	Jonas + Camelia	Same as §4b.	FX3 · 35mm · f/2.5	Both in frame. Held. Quiet. Slow fade after Camelia's line.

5. Lighting

Single soft key from camera-left, ~45° off axis, slightly above eye-line. Soft fill at half key from camera-right (or a bounce). Gentle hair separation. Background should fall off into shadow we do not want a bright, evenly-lit interview look. Colour temperature 3200K throughout. No coloured practicals on screen. No visible lamps in frame.

For §4b and §8 (paired shot), key remains from camera-left, but lift the fill on Camelia's side slightly so she is not under-exposed relative to Jonas. They should read as equals on the monitor.

6. Audio

- Two lavalier mics, one each, tucked.
- Multitrack to separate channels. We need Jonas and Camelia on independent tracks for §4b they will be cut tightly together in post.
- Podcast/audio-only version is a deliverable. Capture clean room and avoid HVAC, dimmer hum, and the building's lift.
- Slate every take audibly. Jonas tends to start before the slate clears — hold him.

7. Hands and stillness

This piece lives or dies on restraint. The single fastest way to break the register is to let the talent gesture like they are presenting from a stage. Hands need their own direction, separate from the rest of the body.

4.1 The default is stillness.

In §1, §3, §4a, §4b, §5, §7 and §8, the default state for both pairs of hands is still. Resting on the lap or on the chair arms. Out of frame whenever the lens allows. The audience reads still hands as 'I mean what I am saying.' They read moving hands as 'I am performing.'

4.2 Section 2 is the only exception.

§2 has three numbered points first, second, third. Jonas can lift one hand for one beat per step, palm slightly turned toward camera, and let it return to rest. That is three small lifts across the section. No counting on fingers. Counting on fingers is a TED-talk move and reads as amateur. The hand suggests the enumeration; the words carry it.

4.3 The §4b paired beat is where most crews fail.

Sitting beside each other, talking about their family, Jonas and Camelia will instinctively reach for each other. A hand on the knee. A hand on the forearm. A small reassuring squeeze between lines. This destroys the section.

The whole reason §4b works is that they are independently telling the truth, not performing tenderness for the camera. Touching breaks the spell. Brief them clearly before they sit down: hands stay on their own lap, no exceptions, and no comforting gestures between lines. If they slip, reset and roll again. They will not understand why this rule exists until they see the cut.

4.5 The reset hand.

Between takes, Jonas's natural tendency is to bring his hands to his face —adjusting his collar, pushing hair back, rubbing his jaw. This is fine off-camera, but it leaks into the start of the next take if he doesn't drop his hands fully before 'action.' The DP needs to call hand reset, not just talent reset, before each roll. A take that begins with a hand still drifting down from the face starts late and feels unstable.

4.6 Things to actively avoid.

- Steepled fingers. Reads as politician, not co-founder.
- Open palms held forward for emphasis. Stage register, wrong audience.
- Counting on fingers during §2.
- Pointing at the camera. Ever.
- Hand-on-heart gestures during §4. The vulnerability is in the words. Adding hands to it makes it theatre.
- Camelia adjusting her hair, jewellery, or clothing during §4b. If anything is bothering her, sort it before the take.

End of brief.
